TIMKEN®

Split Cylindrical Roller Bearing Housing Unit

SAECOWilson are proud to announce the appointment to NZ National Distributor for the range of Timken Split Bearings. Timken acquired REVOLVO SRB Bearings U.K. in 2015 and now offers this world leading split bearing range with the prestigious Timken branding.

Split Bearings have been around for well over a century and were first used to upgrade the many trapped plain bearing positions in steam powered machinery which relied on crankshaft mechanisms. Since that time the attributes of a split rolling element bearing have been applied across all industries around the world.

The initial extra cost converting a standard bearing to a split bearing is far outweighed by the total cost benefits gained through minimised plant downtime, lost production and the least disruption to adjacent machinery. Common applications include fans, drive shafts, propeller shafts, large conveyors, driers, kilns etc and machinery that needs to operate reliably 24 hours a day.

Key Benefits of Timken Split Cylindrical Roller Bearing Housing Units

1. Changing bearings or complete housed units in trapped positions without the need to remove shaft, gearbox, motor, coupling etc saving time, labour, craneage, special equipment and alignment costs.
2. Multiple components means less transport weight to the bearing location, especially elevated positions.
3. Straight forward installation procedure. No bearing internal clearance adjustments required.
4. Best sealing capabilities. Externally aligning housing keeps seals in full alignment and contact.
5. Good high speed and axial expansion capabilities for high temp fan applications etc.
6. Fully interchangeable with other split bearing brands and conventional SN, SD and SAF housings also.

Split Cylindrical Roller Bearing Housed units are used extensively in Marine Propeller Shaft applications highlighting the advantages of fast in-situ bearing changeout.

Timken's new SNQ and SAFQ angled supports enable easy, fast change out of conventional SN,SD and SAF plummer block housings in-situ without shaft disturbance.

QUICK GETS QUICKER THE NEXT GENERATION - SNQ AND SAFQ

Reduce downtime even more! Get an angle on better performance with an evolved Timken split cylindrical roller bearing housed unit design.

An innovative design uses an angled cast iron support to allow mounting in locations with low clearance between the base and center of the shaft.

The new design eliminates the need to raise the shaft to allow clearance for the support base yet maintains standard bearing and housing construction requirements.
